Stan,

I agree with Mr. Chamberlain's comments that the options are Directorate oriented. At the top of page 3 of the Mobility paper we pointed out that mobility at all levels is desirable. However, we chose to focus on the lower and middle levels where Directorate policies should play a key role. At the upper levels the concentration is on inter-Directorate movement.

Mr. Chamberlain doesn't seem to understand the role of the Senior Personnel Resources Board. In para 2 of his memo he talks of the Board making assignments which the Deputy Directors would have to accept. The Board is advisory.

Mr. Chamberlain's comments concern me. How many more of the senior officers don't understand the roles of the different elements? Can they really implement PASG if this confusion exists?
